

McKinley receives prestigious chiropractor award

Dr. Jeffrey McKinley, right, was recently recognized as a fellow of the International College of Chiropractors. He can be reached at 473-2355.

Local chiropractor Dr. Jeffrey McKinley was recently recognized as a fellow of the International College of Chiropractors.

Dr. McKinley is one of only seven chiropractors in the state of Tennessee to have ever received this recognition. This fellowship award is given to doctors of chiropractic who have done extraordinary things for the profession. Only about 1 percent of the chiropractors in the world are recognized as a fellow of the International College of Chiropractors.

The presentation took place at Embassy Suites in Murfreesboro at the Tennessee Chiropractic Association annual convention. The award was presented by current FICC member Dr. Richard Cole. The fellow designation is bestowed upon those whose contributions have made or who will make significant impact upon the science of chiropractic and to those who render valuable and meritorious service to the profession.

The International College of Chiropractic was formed in 1938 to promote the philosophy, science and art of chiropractic and to promote the teaching and the study of chiropractic. The ICCL is a nonprofit organization that encourages a high code of ethics among practitioners, researchers, educators and others in the chiropractic profession.

Dr. McKinley was recognized due to his involvement at the state and national levels. At the stated level, he has been president of the Tennessee Chiropractic Association, a member of the Medicare advisory committee, and has been an instructor across the state for continuing education.

At the national level, he has served as the alternate director for Tennessee to the American Chiropractic Association and is a member of the ACA's Medicare committee. Dr. McKinley is a certified chiropractic sports physician, certified in Graston technique, is a certified Kinesiotape practitioner, and a certified posture exercise professional.

Travel Channel seeks local families to appear on TV show

Do you want to be on TV? Of course you do and Cumberland Caverns is providing the opportunity.

As the fame of Cumberland Caverns continues to spread, thanks in large part to the hit concert series Bluegrass Underground, it has caught the attention of the Travel Channel.

Representatives from the Travel Channel will be coming to Warren County to film a program on extreme overnight adventures at Cumberland Caverns. It was just last month RedBull.com listed Cumberland Caverns as one of the 10 most extreme places to spend the night in the world.

The Travel Channel program will be televised multiple times across the United States. Show producers are currently casting for starring roles in the adventure of a lifetime 333 feet below the surface of the earth. If this interests you, here's what to do.

Show producers are looking for very enthusiastic, adventurous families, ages 6 and up, to join them on their "cave-man campout." To put your family in the running to be on TV, all you have to do is record a short video, upload it to your Dropbox, and share the Dropbox video link via email to cavemancampout@gmail.com.

Please DO NOT send videos directly to the email address.

According to Cumberland Caverns, here are a few examples of the information producers are looking to see on your video. They would like to know about your camping experiences, who in the family is adventurous and who's not.

They would like to hear if you've ever been in the cave before and your thoughts of sleeping overnight in a cave. Have you ever camped outside in a tent or camped in the wilderness? Any other interesting family tidbits that would add flavor to your clip would be appropriate to include.

If your family is selected, the cave-man campout and all food for the length of your stay inside the cave will be provided by Cumberland Caverns. This program will be recorded and televised all across America.

Call Cumberland Caverns marketing director Kelly Roberts at 668-4396 with any questions.

If you'd like for your family to be featured on the Travel Channel spending the night inside Cumberland Caverns, there's a chance that could happen.
